THE SHAMROCK—A PARABLE.

Who tore the shamrock, set by God
In emerald, from the Irish sod,
Where clime and clay combined to suit
The glowing leaf and searching root?
Thro' many a storm of spring it passed,
To bloom in summer sun at last!
What tyrant hand, then tore away
This favorite both of clime and clay?
"It is not torn! what e'er the will,
Our tyrants lack the strength and skill,
For heart and hand would vainly toil
To tear the shamrock from the soil!"

Has then the foot of tyrant trod
The shamrock back into the sod?
It was as common as the air,
A bright existence everywhere;
And even, when indistinctly seen,
Still mingling in the mass of green!
What tyrant marked his hideous track
With hardy shamrock trodden back?
"It is not trodden from its place,
Though trampled by a tyrant race—
They marked their course with fire and steel,
But spread the shamrock with the heel!"

Not torn—or trodden! Is it thus
The lowly shamrock speaks to us?
Must its enduring nature rise,
In taunt and mockery on our eyes!
We have the type on every side!
Where is the power it typified?
That power, which spread our grateful land,
With sward of wealth from strand to strand!
A little craft—a little toil—
Could tear, or tread it from the soil,
And leave the land just fit for slaves,
With scarcely wealth to sod their graves!

Still—let the Irish shamrock be
The type of Irish liberty!
The triple leaf, for ever green,
May stand for People's right Divine,
The People's will, the single stem,
Thro' sun or storm supporting them!
To spirits, like our genial clime,
More prone to virtue than to crime;
To hearts—albeit by tyrants trod—
Not trampled to a barren clod—
Tho' liberty be lost to-day,
It will not long remain away!

WAITING.

ORIGINAL POETRY—FROM THE "IRISHMAN."

Waiting in weariness and woe,
With hearts made sick by many a sorrow,
Until the blessed sun shall glow,
The long look'd-for to-morrow.

Watching the stars that shoot and shine
In trails of useless splendor,
Listening the houseless winds that pine
In sighs most sad and tender.

O Ireland! watchers still for thee,
Bow'd with a load of ancient sorrow,
Full many a fading star we see
But ne'er the look'd-for to-morrow.

God! will it never dawn for us,
That morn which bless'd the poet's vision,
Fill'd with new light and glorious,
And clad with joy's elysian!

In every woe that press'd on us,
In every pain, in every sorrow,
We've said with spirits tremulous—
"Oh, wait until to-morrow!"

We've waited long, we've pointed long
To the false East that brighten'd never,
But night still sits the stars among,
And hope's still patient, cheering song
Shall soon too cease for ever.

THE legal editor of the Cincinnatti Enquirer thinks that "the verdict in Walworth case settles the point that the killing of a father is murder in the second degree, and the killing of one's self is murder in the first degree." Then we suppose that the killing of one's wife is murder in the third degree, the wife being entitled to her third in all cases.

IRISH NEWS.

A HEARTLESS PAWN BROKER.

Mr. John Phelan is the proprietor of a pawnbroking establishment in the main street of Carrick-on-Suir, and though he has spent years in the profession, it is evident that he is still ignorant of the amenities of pawnbroking. On the night of the 28th ult. an intimate and dear friend of his shuffled off the mortal coil; and in respect to the memory of the deceased, Mr. Phelan shut up his shop, and putting on a solemn suit of black hastened to the bier of his departed friend. It was Saturday night, and scarcely had he traversed a block when an eager and seedy-looking man rapped softly at the door of the closed shop but received no answer; again he rapped, calling softly on the name of the absent pawnbroker through the key-hole but silence reigned supreme in the deserted store. Becoming importunate he kicked and banged the doors till the house echoed to the blows, but without success. Then he knew that the cruel pawnbroker had gone away, leaving him with his best suit of clothes "in soak" on the eve of the peaceful Sabbath; and seating himself on the cold curb-stone, he complained loud and bitterly of man's inhumanity to man. But he was not alone in his sorrow, for ere an hour had sped by two, three, five, yea a score of impecunious men in a similar fix had congregated at the door, and were seriously discussing the advisability of bursting it in and arraying themselves in their Sunday habliments. So serious did the row become that it was necessary to call out the "Royal Irish" to preserve the peace and disperse the victimized and clamorous crowd. There is a moral in this story which San Francisco "Uncles" would do well to study.

O'NEILL DAUNT'S REPORT ON IRISH TAXATION.

The report of the Committee appointed by the Home Government Association to examine the financial relations between Great Britain and Ireland, and the pressure of taxation on Irish resources, deal with an eminently 'practical' phase of the Irish question. It shows that, since the Union, Ireland has been most unfairly treated in the matter of taxation, being compelled to contribute nearly one-ninth of the imperial expenditure, whilst her share of the general wealth of the empire does not exceed a seventeenth. Quoting the words of Grattan: 'That Ireland would ultimately be compelled for her own subjugation, and that the country that loves her liberty loves her revenues,' the Committee of the Home Government Association come to the conclusion that Ireland's revenues must be administered by an Irish Parliament. They repudiate the idea which they say permeates the minds of Englishmen, that Ireland has no individuality, and is in the position of an English county, and they maintain the absolute necessity of preserving Irish distinctions in matters of finance as our only protection, from the numerous consequences of British rapacity.' In perusing this pamphlet, we are reminded of Dr. Johnson's emphatic advise to an Irish Unionist: 'Do not unite with us, sir, we shall only unite with Ireland in order to rob her.'

A PATRICIAN ON THE WAR-PATH

On the night of the Cork races, Mr. Curry, son of the Duke of Devonshire's agent, and as mild a mannered youth as ever made a book or swigged a champagne cocktail, sat in the pleasant smoking-room of the Imperial Hotel, Cork, and sucking his fragrant hargilly, awaited the handicapping of the horses. Some untutored plebs who were also enjoying a post—prandial cigar commenced skylarking in a way not pleasing to the host or the less demonstrative guests; accordingly the assistance of a passing "bobby" was invoked. Scarcely had he entered the room when one of the practical jokers flung a club at Mr. Curry, who imagining that the policeman was the aggressor, jumped up and turning on the astonished bobby belabored him with his umbrella till the unfortunate man bellowed for quarter. Instead of apologizing, when he discovered his mistake, Mr. Curry instituted a suit against Captain Taylor of the North Cork Rifles, who was in the room at the time and aided the policeman in capturing the offended gentleman. The jury found damages to the amount of £150 for the plaintiff. Had he been some disaffected plebeian, he would have been clubbed almost to death in the first place, and severely fined and reprimanded in the second.

A THIEVING SON OF MARS.

The hired bravos of the English Government have been distinguishing themselves in various ways for the last month. First there was sub-Inspector Montgomery who without compunction, murdered his friend in cold blood for filthy lucre sake; had it been jealousy or any other gentlemanly passion, we could have sympathized with the unfortunate Inspector, but we have no patience with an educated aristocrat who dabbles in human blood for the love of gold. Another inspector earned unenviable notoriety as the would be ravisher of a young and innocent girl, while half a dozen privates have within the past month, stood in the felon's dock to answer to grave and disgraceful charges. It does not appear strange then with such examples as those before his eyes, that Private James O'Brien of the 109th Regiment, should steal 17 shillings from Wm. Foley at Charleville. His ability was not however commensurate with his ambition and the dishonest son of Mars terminated his glorious but brief carreer in the felons' dock. The turnkey of the Charleville jail will entertain him for six months.

HOME RULE DEMONSTRATION.

On the 2d inst., a great Home Rule demonstration was held at a place called Arboe, in the county Tyrone, on the other side of Loguh Neagh, a few miles from Lurgan. At an early hour a large number of people from Armagh and neighborhood left and crossed over the Lough in boats, to be present at the demonstration. The assembly, it is stated, was one of the largest that ever was seen in the north of Ireland the procession extending for several miles along the way. The processionists were attired in regalia of the usual national hue, and were accompanied by music of the same description. All passed over quietly. Several demonstrations of a similar character were held in other parts of the north, all having for their object the advocacy of Home Rule principles, and amnesty to the political prisoners.

AMATEURS AND PROFESSIONALS.

A few bloated aristocrats calling themselves the Ennis Rifle Club, issued a challenge to the officers and men of the 64th regiment, stationed at Clare Castle, to contest for the palm of superiority, with the Enfield Rifle, at the shooting grounds of Dromcliffe, in the presence of a large number of spectators. The challenge was promptly accepted and on the 6th inst, the match came off. The competitors were six aside, and the distance three, four and five hundred yards. As might have been expected the amateurs were easily vanquished, and it is just as well that they were. That portion of the Irish population to whom is granted the privilege of wandering over the country gun in hand, are for the most part, very poor specimens of Irishmen.

GALLANT CAPTURE OF A SINGLE RIFLE.

Some of the ever vigilant Constabulary, in searching the luggage of a passenger on the Allen steamer, on her arrival in Lough Foyle, discovered a rifle with no fewer than 290 rounds of ammunition. This looked as though the owner were about to commence a seven years' war on the Police barracks of the North, and caused quite a commotion in loyal circles. The passenger succeeded, however, in proving that he was not a member of a Canadian volunteer company, knew nothing about the Fenian organization, and was a staunch believer in the wisdom of a constitutional monarchy. He was dismissed with an apology for his detention, and received as a hero by the Orange enthusiasts of Derry.

"TO HELL WITH THE QUEEN."

John Magrath, a publican of Sallins, Kildare, was charged with using the above strong language when dilating on the virtues of old "Vic" with a private of the Kildare Rifles and two men belonging to the 103d Regiment stationed there. Whether it was that the character of his accusers was notoriously bad, or his reputation was too good as a staunch loyalist, we are unable to say, but, strange to narrate, after a prolonged hearing, the case was discharged. It is to be hoped that he will be more discreet in choosing his confidants for the future. We have our own private opinion of a man who seeks out three contemptible myrmidons of the law to whom he may unburthen his soul.

THE MEDALS OF PROGRESS

At the Great Vienna Exposition were not awarded to the great manufacturing nations of the world alone; Dublin came in for her share of the prizes, and Mr. Henry Appleyard of Sackville street was awarded a medal for an assortment of genuine Balbriggan ladies' stockings, displayed by him. Only last week we chronicled the success of a young Irish student who outstripped his British rivals at the Liverpool Civil Service Examinations. Notwithstanding the disadvantages under which they labor, our brethren in the old land are asserting their rights and holding their own with gratifying success.

THE AMNESTY ASSOCIATION

have addressed a circular to the Irish members of Parliament, asking them for a declaration of their views with regard to the liberation of the persons convicted for alleged complicity with political offences in Ireland, and also soliciting pecuniary aid in favor of the agitation for their discharge. The Association maintain that those men detained—to the number of nearly fifty—"are but the humble followers of a movement, the leaders of which have long since been liberated." What answer the members have returned, we are unable to state.

TENANT FARMERS AS LEGISLATORS.

A great mass meeting took place at Shercock in the county Cavan on the 2d inst. The object of the meeting was to organize the county so that the people might be prepared to select and return to Parliament, at the next general election, two tenant farmers who will faithfully represent their views. Large crowds attended from Drung, Kill, Laragh, Lavy, Drumgoon, and other places. There were no fewer than 30,000 persons in the procession. Mr. Jas. Brennan, P. L. G., of Coorlatty, Lannen, was chairman, and the meeting was addressed by eminent speakers.

THE BANDON RAID.

Two men named Rooney and Connell, who had been tried for complicity in the Bandon raid, were put on trial, on an indictment charging them with assaulting a militiaman named Clancy, and unlawfully detaining him in custody. The jury disagreed and were discharged. The prisoners were put back, as were the others charged with the raid, until next assizes.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

FATE OF A COLD-BLOODED MURDERER.

An old German named J. C. Keller, who murdered his wife, a woman named Boyd and two children, and afterward set the cabin in which they resided on fire to conceal the bloody deed, was lynched by the excited populace at La Cygne, Kan., on the 21st ult. When the sheriff of La Cygne learned that an attempt would be made to lynch Keller, he had him taken from the jail and placed in a sewing-machine wagon. The driver was instructed to drive rapidly to Prola, which he endeavored to do, but the axles heated so as to expand the iron and the wheels became locked. Before they had time to cool, 500 armed men had ridden up and taken charge of the prisoner, whom they instantly escorted to the woods. The formality of a trial having been gone through, the prisoner was asked whether he had anything to say. He said, "No; but I would like to have another smoke."

The committee of twelve reported seven for hanging and three for a legal trial. The captain then addressed the mob:—

"Gentlemen, here is your man, I turn him over to you. I think he ought to have a legal trial; but do as you please with him. Some of you come forward."

No one stepped forward until Mr. Boyd, the father and husband of the dead and mangled victims, walked towards the stolid old murderer. Six men and boys followed him, and the old man was put into a wagon.

He knelt down on a plank, used as a seat, and a handkerchief was put over his eyes. When he was asked if he had anything to say—"Yes," he replied, "I am not the guilty man. I hope to meet all in that world I now go to. I am innocent."

Mr. Boyd now placed a common rope halter over Keller's dirty neck, saying:—"This I do to the man that murdered my poor wife and children."

"You are mistaken, Boyd," answered Keller; "you have got the wrong man."

These were the last words he spoke. The wagon began to move, and Keller, to aid in his own death, gave his last leap, swinging gently out of the wagon, the rope tightened, his hands twitched convulsively and Keller was slowly strangling to death. The crowd now slowly adjourned, as quietly as if going home from church or a mass meeting. The body hung about forty-five minutes, when the sheriff rode out and cut it down. Thus ended one of the most remarkable tragedies in the history of Kansas.

THE ETERNAL RAILROAD MONOPOLY.

The feeling of popular indignation against the outrageous and intimidating conduct of the Central Pacific Railroad magnates, is daily growing stronger, and bid fair to end in a manner detrimental to the interests of the people and dangerous to the security of the capitalists. The New York Sun of last Saturday says, that the people of Nevada are bitter in their complaint against the extortions practised by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as are those of California, with good reason, as the company discriminate severely against them in freights and passenger fares. It seems almost incredible yet it is nevertheless a fact that people going to the Atlantic States from Nevada usually send to San Francisco for their tickets, finding it cheaper to pay over the entire road, than to depart from an intermediate station. The rates from Chicago to Elko are far higher than the company charges from New York to Japan. The last straw which has destroyed the patience of eastern journalists, is the report that the Central Pacific ring has purchased the most productive mines in Wyoming, from which Nevada derives its supply of coals. This has been done to crush opposition by monopolizing the feul trade, with such facts as those staring us in the face, it does not seem at all wonderful that the Herald, which is essentially a sensational journal, should raise the cry of cæsarism.

THE NOVA SCOTIA HORROR.

The storm which swept over the Eastern States some ten days ago, was productive of a large amount of injury, both on land and ocean. Dispatches from Halifax, state that at Cape Breton alone one hundred vessels, for the most part fishing crafts, have been wrecked on shore, while at Louisburg eighteen vessels have been lost, many vessels whose names are unknown have gone down with all hands, and the shore has been for days past literally strewn with the bodies of the dead, whom the sea had given up. At Canso every ship in the harbor was stranded high and dry, and every wharf and fishing establishment swept away. The City Hall is a heap of splinters, and all the buildings public and private are more or less shattered by the violence of the storm—out of a fleet of 300 fishing vessels, only 20 remains. The fishing population have lost their all, and many of them had to fly from their dwellings naked into the pitiless storm—In the memory of the oldest inhabitant no such storm has ever swept over the land.

LAW AND LAGER.

The trial of the German beer dealers of Worcester, Mass, was concluded before the Superior Court on Tuesday. The defense offered was that the beer sold was Schenck beer, and not lager beer, and that it was not intoxicating. The jury was out six hours, but failed to agree, six being for conviction and six for acquittal. After the jury had reported, the Court adjourned sine die. The result is considered as a victory for the Germans, and the cases will probably be dropped by the Government.

REFORM IN RAILROAD MANAGEMENT.

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held on the 1st inst., under the auspices of the Boston Grange. The President stated that the principal object, was to effect cheap transportation of property from the East to the West, as well as to thoroughly reform the present system of railroad management, it is not only necessary but indispensable. Statistics were produced showing the earnings of various roads under the present system, and proving that the cost of freight and travel could be reduced to one-quarter of the present rates, and still leave a fair margin. Amassa Walker said this could be accomplished in three ways: First, by a general law fixing rates of travel and freights on all roads in the country. Second, to create new lines between the principal depots of transportation. Third, by purchasing all the roads and placing them under Government management, to be leased, which would open all roads to the public at the cheapest rates. He reviewed the different plans, and thought the last the most feasible. He considered that the question of railroad reform was a National question, which would soon become a political one, and that reform could only be achieved by political action.

ENTERPRISING HASH-HOUSES.

At the Twin Mountains House, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, a performing bear, and a white donkey are the attractions. A few days ago, Health Commissioner Huchinson bantered a Brooklin merchant to ride the ass for $250. Mr. Beecher held the merchant's hat while he rode twice around the hotel piazza, and went off over the donkey's head into the dirt. The money was paid over to Mr. Beecher, who devoted it to a subscription to relieve a Baptist minister's farm from a mortgage. Sundays Mr. Beecher preaches, and week days plays with the chicken, the bear and donkey. The sanctimonious William proves a big card for the establishment. Next season there will be a rush made by watering place hotel proprietors for noted individuals. George Francis Train, the Indian Chiefs Santanta and Big Tree, who are now in the Texas Penetentiary; Daniel Pratt, Jr., the great American Taveller; Jeff Davis, Brigham Young, and whatever remnant of the Modocs General Jeff C. Davis leaves unhanged will be sought after.

THE KENTUCKY KU KLUX.

A "special correspondent" sent into the Ku Klux counties to investigate the charges, gives a list of eighty-six outrages committed in Henry, Owen and Franklin counties since 1870. These outrages vary from simple warnings to property holders not to employ negroes, to arsons, whippings, pillages and murders. Governor Leslie, some weeks since, offered a reward of $500 each for the apprehension of the Ku Klux concerned in the murder of the negro Wilson on the Knox-Brown plantation, but since that proclamation several outrages have been committed. The outlaws laugh at all attempts to secure their conviction. When one is arrested he easily proves an alibi by other members of the gang.

The correspondent believes the whole number of organized Ku Klux in those three counties does not exceed 100, who have regular places of meeting and plans of operation.

JAPANESE STUDENTS RECALLED.

The London Times states that the young men numbering six hundred sent out by the Japanese Government to Europe and America, to study our language, manners &c, have been ordered to return home without parley. The reason given for the recall is that on the return of the students from Europe and America they are unable to bear a satisfactory examination in the studies they were pursuing. The failure is attributed to the want of a knowledge of the language of the country in which they have studied. Acting upon this the Japanese Government have determined to send no more students abroad until they have become proficient in English, German and French languages. We may confidently look forward to an emigration to Japan of long visages, dyspeptic and spectacled professors to Japan by the next mail steamer.

THE MANITOBA QUESTION.

A Washington dispatch states that the Manitoba question will be brought before a British tribunal in a few days, the Court holding a special session therefor, and no other cases to be tried. Minister Thornton says the British Government is firm in its conviction that the action of its officials was strictly in accordance with law, and expresses his conviction that the decision of the Court will be adverse to the parties now in custody. The Court will be held at Fort Garry or Winnipeg. Meanwhile, a proposition to release the American prisoners on bail is rejected.

RAVAGES OF CHOLERA IN ILLINOIS.

A dispatch from Okawville says that the cholera, in true Asiatic type, is raging fearfully. Twenty-three persons died in twelve hours. Among them was the bridge builder of the Southeastern road and three of his children. Five died in one family within three hours. The patients die within a few minutes after the attack, and turn black immediately. Medical aid has been sent for from the surrounding towns, and people are rapidly leaving the place. Those remaining are using disinfectants freely, and burning tar in the streets. It is said no local cause exists for the disease.

The Indian problem is now regarded as solved for the future in Utah and Nevada.

The Herald and Cæsarism—Will Grant Emulate the Ambitious Roman?—Railroad Monopolies v. the People—Trouble in Store for the Capitalists.

The New York Herald is working itself into a fine patriotic frenzy over the Subject of Cæsarism, by which expressive title it designates the attempt of Grant's warmest adherents to elect him to a third term, with a view to finally enacting the role of the noble Roman, from whom the title is derived. The majority of Eastern journals affect to sneer at the Herald; and while we all know that the most enterprising of journals is somewhat given to the sensational, we cannot but feel that it is entirely within the range of possibility at some future period, but certainly not in this generation, an attempt may be made to confer the purple on some ambitious president, intoxicated with flattery and sustained by the powerful monopolists and shoddy aristocracy of the East and West. Appended are some remarks on the subject by Joseph B. McCullough, editor of the St. Louis Democrat, a powerful administration organ:

THE GREAT MISTAKE

seems to be in assuming that General Grant wants to become Cæsar. Buckle, in his "History of Civilization," has the correct idea, I think. Neither Cæsar nor Napoleon would have been able to destroy the liberties of the Roman or French nation had it not been for the fact that public opinion in Italy and in France permitted—nay, demanded—the elevation of a Cæsar. Whether the public mind in this country is ready for Cæsarism yet remains to be seen. I don't think that it is in General Grant's mind or will, personally to become a modern Cæsar; but there are a great many men who want a third term and have a desire for a strong government. Grant has shown great ability in doing things; he has let matters go along and taken them as they came. His administration, without having any very warm admirers or many special points for administration, has been, in the main, successful. Grant has suffered a good deal from flatterers, who have told him that he is a second Washington; but he never believed it, and perhaps he would rather be a first Grant than a second Washington.

AFRAID OF THE PEOPLE.

The railroad interests of the West are afraid of the people. The farmers' granges have frightened them into a fear of Communism and made them believe that the government is not strong enough. Every dollar of railroad stock in the States where granges exist represents the idea of its owners that the government is too weak, and as capitalists love their money better than their country or its institutions they look for somebody that will lay a strong hand on the people and give them security that their property shall not be destroyed. This may mean empire or it may mean monarchy; but it means a stronger government than at present exists.

THE RAILROAD CONSPIRATOR KINGS.

I think the Herald makes a mistake in attributing paramount influence to the office-holders in controlling American politics. I can name a single railroad that can control more votes in the West and "set up" more conventions than any office-holder west of the Alleghanies. Grant's administration is not strong in its office-holders—in fact, its office-holders are, as a class, weak men. His Cabinet, with the exception of Senator Delano, is made up of men without political influence at their homes or elsewhere. They are all good men, but Delano is the only politician among them. A railroad 100 miles long, running through any of the Western States, can bring to bear more influence in a State Convention than any member of General Grant's Cabinet.

The Railroad monopolies spend more money and have more men in their employment, and they will use the money if necessary to protect themselves and their property. Take, for instance, the Chicago and Alton Railroad, running from St. Louis to Chicago in the best part of Illinois, with perhaps fifty stations between these to two points and employing a number of men vastly greater than all the postmasters and revenue agents in Illinois, if not in the West.

ANTI-MONOPOLISTS OF THE WEST.

During the past year a feeling of hostility to railroads has grown up in the States west of Indiana which needs only a first class leader to fan it into positive aggression. A man cannot be elected constable in the State of Illinois to day without first proving that he does not own a dollar of stock in a railroad of any kind and that he is not in the employment of a railroad company; and if the present spirit prevails until next fall every Congressman elected west of Indiana, excluding the large cities, will have to pledge himself in advance to opposition against the great railroad interests. Monopolists believe that any form of Government which allows farmer's grangers to elect judges and state officers, is not strong enough to protect them in their rights, and they consequently demand any form of Government which will secure their dividends, and keep their stocks at par. I do not know that railroad men or any other class of capitalists desire the subversion of the Republic; but the government bondholders must naturally be as timid on this subject as the railroad stockholders, both classes live on incomes derived from investments, and what effects the one will effect the other. When the railroad stockholders get scared the government bondholders will take the alarm and both will unite in the common cause.

THE PRESS AND THE PEOPLE.

In case Cæsarism was attempted in a practical fashion, I believe that all of that portion of the press that cannot be approached by military power will take the side of the people against Cæsarism. But it is difficult to say what the provost marshals may be able to do. If they can repeat the programme of Napoleon they will muzzle every newspaper editor in the land who does not endorse Cæsarism. In the event of such a struggle, the press and the people will beat all the forces that can be brought against them, and united they will kill forty-nine out of the fifty men who may have the ambition to enact the role of Cæsar. It is an interesting role, I know, to play that of Cæsar; but the press and the people will kill the would-be Cæsars not only morally but physically. Assassination will be put at a premium and the man who kills the largest number of Cæsars will fill the niche of the greatest hero in American history.

A Reminiscence of the Franco-Prussian War—A Valiant Sportsman.

"I went by diligence, and was honored by the company of a French poodle, who climbed up to the Impériale with his master, a sportsman on the look-out for seagulls, and howled at objects of interest along the road. The sportsman wore a suit of velveteens, leather gaiters up to his hips, and a white jockey cap like an apple pudding. He told me he had commanded a corps of sharpshooters during the war and had been taken prisoner; but when the revanche came it would be a different story, for he and many other patriots were schooling themselves to be unerring marksmen—saying which he suddenly raised his double-barrel, and, in his sitting posture, covered two passing sparrows with a cool and deadly aim, fired and missed them both. The driver, who had been pensively chewing a quid in front of us, gave a start which almost shot him on to the lean backs of his team, and he remonstrated; but the sportsman affirmed that going off a rolling coach was excellent practice, and then he gave us the story about the last train which entered Paris before the siege. He was on that train, and passing a company of Prussians ten miles outside Paris, thrust his head out of the window and discharged six shots into their midst with his revolver. But he had scarcely achieved this valiant exploit when, to the horror of himself and his fellow passengers, a battery of artillerymen were descried bringing a field piece to bear upon a curve in the line which the train would have to pass. It was a minute full of emotion, as the train neared the curve, but the Prussians aimed too high, so that the sportsman lived to narrate his lucky escape, thankfully wagging his apple-pudding cap in acknowledgement."

CALIFORNIA AND RUSSIA.—The letter of T. C. Smith, Esq., American Consul at Odessa, to the Alta of this city, showing that the exportation of wheat from Southern Russia has risen in thirteen years from 19,000,000 to 47,000,000 bushels, and expressing the opinion that in 1880 it will have reached 80,000,000 bushels has been copied extensively. It conveys some of the most important information laid before the people of California in a long time. The Alta in commenting on this letter says:

"The past competition of Southern Russia in the European wheat markets has been as much as our farmers could bear: but what shall be the result in the future, if that vast region which has great advantages over us in proximity to the consumers, is to double its production every ten years? We are impoverishing our soil without enriching our farming community to enable the British and French to get cheap bread, by aid of which they are enabled to underbid our home manufactures. But for the increase of 50,000,000 bushels of wheat annually sent to Europe, from new sources of supply within the last ten years, the price of bread would now be fifty per cent., and of labor twenty-five per cent, higher in Great Britain and France than it is, and the emigration to the New World would have been much more active than it has been.

France In the Future.

AS REVEALED TO THE EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE, AND DESCRIBED TO AN UNBELIEVING NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT.

"Au contraire!" she replied with great emphasis. "We are perfectly satisfied, and if one might complain at all, it would be that some of our friends are not satisfied to let affairs move on as they are going, but wish to hurry them a little. That is not wise. As long as M. Thiers—the wretched man!—was allowed to coquet with the reds and to encourage the Communards, there was danger. Now that he is gone all moves well. Marshal MacMahon is a prudent man [un tres prudent un tres honnete homme.] He loves France. His wife, who counsels him well, is perhaps ambitious, but she is devout and fears God. The Orleans princes are no longer to be spoken of. The friends of Henri V.—loyal to an idea—are ours when we want them Yes, my friend, all goes well; the future is ours, and God is on our side."

"But this future?" said I.

"Eh, bien!" replied the Empress; "you know what it must be. France, in her good time—in God's good time—will lead the reaction against the forces which have until now seemed to threaten the very existence of society and of religion throughout all Europe. Her sufferings and her humiliation have been great; her sins demanded this penance, she has performed it; God has absolved her, or will soon absolve her; and then, once more, she will become his sword to chastise, and his balm to heal. This future of which you ask—do you not know it? I see it all before me—France once more at the head of nations; the robbers driven out of Rome; the Pope restored to his dominions; Germany divided again into small and harmless States; Austria freed from the sickly dreams that now enfeeble her, strong again in her ancient faith, and hand in hand with France. This is the future.

The Sea Serpent has appeared, after a lapse of many days, in Lake Ontario. Only a short time ago, he alarmed some lonely whalers within pistol shot of the South pole, and soon after was observed disporting himself in the clear limpid waters of the Red Sea. Scarcely a journal in the civilized world but has chronicled his appearance as reported by some veracious correspondent. Why, then, do our local dailies slumber? Surely he must at some time have visited our expansive bay. The matter requires investigation by the "live paper." A talented reporter should be instantly sent to Davy Jones' locker to interview old Neptune, and find out why the big water snake has refused to enter the Golden Gate.

DRILL BY THE SAN FRANCISCO CADETS IN NEW YORK.—Nearly two thousand people assembled at the Seventh Regiment Armory, New York, on Tuesday night last, to witness the drill of the San Francisco Cadets. General Shaler, Commander of the National Guard of the State of New York, and Colonel Emmons Clarke and other officers of the Seventh Regiments, were present. The movements of the Cadets were executed with extreme promptitude and precisnon, and excited frequent applause.

The elementary schools in London have to provide for the immense number of six hundred and twenty-four thousand one hundred and ninety-three children between the ages of five and fifteen.

Dr. Lucky has been removed from the office of Principal of the State Normal School. He is prepared to dispute the truth of the adage that "it is better to be born Lucky than rich."

United Workingmen's San Francisco CO-OPERATIVE

The above stamp is placed on the Goods made by this Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Company; and they desire to inform the Trade and the Public that an unprincipled Boot and Shoe firm of this city (a house doing a large business, and which ought to be above such a trick) are stamping their Worthless Chinese-made goods with a partial imitation of our Stamp, hoping to sell their goods as our make, and thereby injure our trade. We employ no Chinese labor, nor ever did, and our goods have always given satisfaction and built up a trade which those parties in their petty meanness are seeking to deprive us of. Therefore, we caution all who wish to buy our goods and patronize WHITE LABOR, to see that they are stamped as above.

The Duke of Edinburgh's Marriage.

An official organ in Russia discourses in the following gushing style on the approaching marriage of Her Imperial Highness Princess Maria Alevandrovina, who will in a short time be united in the unhappy bonds of wedlock with the Duke of Edinburgh, a younger son of the old harridan who monopolizes the British throne. The young prince is, without one exception, the meanest, most contemptible and inflated humbug that ever bowed to a royal salute or a well-turned compliment, and capable of any act of petty meanness, from cheating his washerwoman to picking the pocket of the public. His betrothed is, for ought we know to the contrary, a fair specimen of the royal maiden, with a little more of the milk of human kindness in her composition than is usually bestowed on the scions of royalty. It was with the greatest difficulty her abhorrence to the match was overcome, yet such is the calm effrontery and unblushing impudence of all subsidized organs antagonistic to the people's interests, from the hireling sheet of a railroad monopoly to the inflated journal of a despotic court, that we find the aristocratic editor of a Russian Court journal publishing the following paragraph in the vain hope of gulling the people. Lucky it is for the future generations, however, that the day has come when national interests are more powerful than dynastic connections:—

Notwithstanding his youth, the illustrious betrothed of the Grand Duchess has enriched his mind by long and profitable travelling. When his life was attempted in Australia, as also on other occasions, he showed great courage and uncommon firmness of character. His noble frankness, his brilliant and cultivated intellect, his exceeding amiability and affability have gained for him the sincere attachment of all those who were fortunate enough to come in contact with him.

The Shah Again.

The Herald correspondent, who dances attendance on the heels of the Shah, wants to know—

What could you expect of a human prince away from hearth and home—never a one of his seventy wives to comfort and steady him? "This, Your Majesty," said the polite French Commissioner, "is a specimen of bronze work from Paris Diana, you observe, is"——but His Majesty stood in an entranced mood, quietly holding his spectacles on his nose as he looked into the blue eyes of a maiden who had struck his fancy. Yes, truly, this expression and source of all wisdom looked into the blue eyes—as man looks at a woman when she passes him. Then he spoke to her in French, but she knew not that tongue. Then he patted her on the cheek—a language she evidently comprehended—for the roses flowed into her cheeks, flaming over the shadows and brightness of her beauty like an aurora in the northern skies. O blessed among woman, German maiden! And what envious hearts are all around you, hating you as they would a basilisk, for enchanting this Shah! And Francis Joseph, when anything bored, or bothered, or vexed him, as I fear many things did on this progress, first stood on one leg and then on another, twisting his brown whiskers nervously, never observing the fascination of his guest; but studying some discreet tapestry, with cows and a brook and innocent, playing children that was hanging over him. The lightning conductor of virtue could not speak to the maiden and so commanded one of his suite to make a communication, and went on. And when a little later your correspondent discovered the Danubian beauty on the arm of a Persian grandee in a cashmere garment his inference was that a new bride had been added to the happy home of Teheran, and that the prince who never prays without causing the dew to crystalize into pearls has added another unit to the sum of his happiness.

FRANK WALWORTH is at present filling an humble position in the shoe factory, Sing Sing. The contractor of the department requires a convict without any thieving propensities to take charge of the stock in office, and as Frank is just the man to fill the bill, he is hidden away in a gloomy, musty room, much to the disgust of visitors. When he comes out at the end of ten years, he will be in no better condition to battle with the world than when he went in. He will fall back upon the gentlemanly and crowded occupation of a clerkship, and his ten years of servitude will be to him a punishment, but not a profit. It would occur to most people who are practical that when a number of men were together in one establishment for life, or at least practically for a long period, their long terms could be utilized so as to send them out of the prison self-reliant men.

THE editorial writer of the Western Celt has evidently become a very much married man, judging by the following paragraph from his powerful and facile pen:

That miserable and insignificant nonentity, the bridegroom, is of course of no account whatever during the wedding ceremony. Nobody looks at him, nobody thinks of him. There is no tears for his immolation, no smelling bottles for his agitation. He is, for the time, a black-coated background to a picture of radient beauty. What is he that he should interrupt with foolish nervousness the even course of the ceremony which fixes his fate forever? Alas nothing!

It was a lucky chance that led Vesquez, the Mexican deperadoe, to Snyder's store last week, for at that time, Sheriff Wasson was in the throes of political campaigning with a fair prospect of suffering defeat at the hands of his democratic opponents. The energy and pluck which he has manifested in the pursuit of the blood thirsty bandit has turned the tables in his favor, and won for him the support and admiration of all law abiding citizens. Little thought the daring assassin, as he dealt with unsparing hand, on the eventful morning of the tragedy, that the crime which brought desolation and sorrow to one happy home, would have an entirely different effect on another. Truly it is an ill wind that bodes no one good.

A girl in Wisconsin, while attending a picnic recently, nearly lost her reason by stepping on the body of a suicide in climbing over a fence. The deceased had cut his throat with a razor, and his body had lain undiscovered for many days.

Bread has almost reached famine prices in France.

SCENE—crowded horse car. Strong-minded female—"Sir, I would have you to understand that in this enlightened century no one but a brute would suffer a lady to stand in this manner." Mild looking old gentleman, savagely—"Madam, I belong to the dark ages, and if you call me a brute again I'll shake the life out of you." Female faints; grand hysterical tableau.

SPAIN, ENGLAND AND GERMANY.

Not daring openly to declare war against the young Republic of Spain, the despotic powers of Europe are showing their hands, and venting their spleen against free institutions in the most contemptible manner imaginable, by stealing piecemeal the ironclads of the Spanish fleet. This is an insult which no government having the least spark of spirit could fail to resent; but Spain—Republican Spain, is now engaged in a desperate and momentous struggle, not for additional power, but for existence. Two parricidal factions cripple her, and all she can do is to wait to avenge insults which, owing to her wretched condition, can be offered with impunity. It is true indeed that England and Germany capture only rebel vessels, and do so under the pretense that they sail under no recognized flag; but the chances are decidedly in favor of their being never returned. Germany wants not only a fleet but a pretext to interfere in the internal affairs of Spain, and to place on her throne the kin of these plundering Goths, who, twelve centuries since, devastated the soil and brought destruction and degradation into the grand old historic land. It is easier to steal than to buy or build, and having embroiled herself with the insurgents, she has a pretext not only to seize Spanish vessels, but to obtain a footing on Spanish soil with the ulimate object of placing, if possible, some petty Junker on the throne of Charles the Fifth, to play with, but less successfully, the role of Joseph Bonaparte. England, too, has a powerful fleet in Spanish waters, but she has no wish whatever to land her troops in Spain. She is proverbially jealous and looks with a suspicious eye on every nation of the present day that aspires to build and man a fleet as powerful as her own; and although Spain is, at the present moment, one of the least powerful of European nations, she cannot forget the memory of the powerful fleet that once ruled in every sea, respected and feared, under the flag of old Spain. Added to this is the hatred which England's aristocracy have of popular institutions—a hatered which led them to undertake a long, bloody war against republican France, and swell the national debt to four thousand million dollars. Between internicene strife and the open and avowed hostility of these two powerful nations, Germany and England, Spain is now reduced to a pitiable plight; but it does not follow that she shall remain in that condition. Thanks to the vigor of Salmeron, the troops of the Republic are again reducing the misguided insurgents beneath the authority of the government, and once peace reigns in the South, the power of the Carlists will soon be destroyed. Spain, phœnix-like will rise midst internal dissensions and foreign scowls, as France did when she was torn by internal factions from the English Channel to the Mediterranean Sea, and when all Europe was up in arms against her. Then we hope the reckoning with England will come. We have no idea that the proud Spaniards will allow the insolence of England to go unpunished. She even now pollutes the territory by holding the key of the Mediteranean. To recover that will be the work of regenerated Spain. Then will come Ireland's turn, that is if Ireland is prepared for the emergency. Let the Irish Nationalists then prepare and be ready, for the time must eventually come when England's vast empire, founded in fraud and cemented by the blood of nations, will disappear as a dream of the night, leaving behind only the memory of her horrors and crimes.

A Patriotic Priest.

It affords us pleasure to announce to our readers that, on Thursday next, the Rev. Father Sheehy of Rathkeale, County Limerick, will lecture in Platt's Hall on the Past and Future of Ireland, Her Trials and Her Hopes. It is unnecessary for us to say that the Rev. Father Sheehy is a polished gentleman, well-informed on the subject on which he proposes to lecture, and cannot fail to interest any audience before whom he may appear. Aside from his abilities as a lecturer, Father Sheehy is entitled to the respect of all enlightened Irishmen as the representative of his patriotic and illustrious bishop, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Butler. Father Sheehy does not thrust himself on us a lecturer—it is only at the earnest solicitation of a host of patriotic and representative Irishmen that he has come forward to still further increase the respect and admiration which every nationalist who has had the pleasure of his acquaintance entertains for his talents as a speaker and his courtesy as an accomplished gentleman. We hope that he will receive the support of all Irishmen in the good work he has undertaken; and that after achieving an eminent success he may return to the old land happy in the thought that, though leagues of ocean separates us from the green hills of our native land, the hearts of the Irishmen on this western slope are as warm, their hopes as buoyont, and their impulses as generous as those of their brethren at home.

HOME RULE.

It appears that Mr. Butt the justly celebrated lawyer and member of Parliament for Limerick, is not after all coming to America. In fact it is extremely doubtful if the eloquent and learned Queens Counsel, ever thought seriously for a moment of leaving the old land. Perhaps it is as well that he has elected to stay at home, for there he can do more good than he could hope to accomplish in America. If he does nothing more he may educate the minds of the people and incite them to demand home rule in a manner which England would not dare to refuse. He can tell us little that we do not already know, and we doubt seriously whether his burning eloquence would fire the flagging zeal of those who have deserted the good cause in despair, while the measures he proposes for the amelioration of Ireland's wrongs, are altogether too much of the milk and water pattern to meet with the approbation of the men who in storm and sunshine have stood by the good ship of Irish Republicanism. It is very well for old country journals, to advocate an Irish Parliament, for the so called liberty of the press allows them to commit themselves no further, and even those who advocate it too warmly, are looked on with a suspicious eye by the watchful myrmidons of the British law. But here in this free land of the west, under the flag of the greatest republic of the earth, we can express our contempt of monarchial institutions with impunity. As citizens of our adopted country, we enjoy its priviliges, and share the blessings of a free government. Its quarrels have been ours, we have rejoiced in its prosperity, and when danger threatened its flag, taken up arms and shed our blood as freely in its defence as we would for the freedom of Ireland, and the establishment of a republic on its soil, sacred with the blood of some of the purest and noblest-souled patriots that ever drew the sword in defence of their native land.

Our cause is not that of a single race, isolated and oppressed, but of the whole world it is the sacred cause of freedom, and should appeal as strongly to the native born American as it does to the adopted citizen of Irish birth. A monarchial form of government is inimical to a republican, no matter how friendly the relations may be or how strong the ties that bind them together. A republic is the government of a noble, patriotic and educated people—a monarchy that of slaves—bondsmen, whether they flaunt their degradation in purple and fine linen or grovel in naked and savage squalor. Our countrymen at home detest a despotic power, and they would not be human if they did otherwise. For centuries they have been oppressed and blamed for their enforced wretchedness. Denied the blessings of education and then despised for their ignorance. Centuries have rolled by and the march of intellect and growth of science and art have converted barbarous hordes into polished nations; the homes of savages into the seats of learning and industry; but what have they done for poor, down-trodden, degraded Ireland? Ye who would learn go and consult the pages of modern Irish history—ask of those inexorable prison walls, on which her martyrs have died like dogs, and the dungeons where they have fretted the best years of their lives away in bitter disappointment and despair, and what do you find?—Crimes as black as those which disgraced and polluted the Inquisition in its darkest days, or the arms of the Paynim hordes, or Atilla's memory—performed in the broad daylight and before the eyes of Europe under the sacred name of law and justice. Happy homes reduced to ashes, and besprinkled with the blood of their brave defenders, wives ravished and daughters dishonored by hired bravos of a bigoted and blood-thirsty English government—and then they preach us patience and bid us rejoice that an all-wise and Christian administration will, in due season, make restitution for the grievous wrongs done by their predecessors. We have waited long and patiently, drinking deep and bitter draughts of sorrow, till the iron has entered into our souls—till the name of Britain is an abomination to our ears, and monarchy stinks in our nostrils. Now they dangle before our eyes the gilded bauble home rule; but in the spirit of the excited Jewish populace who thirsted for the blood of the Messiah, we cry—every Irishman with the true principles of republicanism engendered in his heart cries—"Away with it! We will have none of this tinsel sop to Cerberus!" The Irishman of to-day is not the Irishman of a century since; he may be still visionary—he is certainly as brave as ever, but experience and the defeats of our forefathers has taught us wisdom, while the atrocities of the despotic power that crushes us with relentless heel have implanted more firmly in our minds the memory of her misdeeds. The old holy hate, doubly intensified, rankles in our hearts, the buoyant spirit of our forefathers animates our breasts, we despise every act of British concilliation, and acknowledge but one form of government. When that government is established on Irish soil, and a republican flag floats from her spires and battlements, we shall be satisfied, for, ere that has been accomplished, Britain will no more be numbered amongst the nations of the earth. A hostile foe will man her fleets, and revel in her lordly mansions, and the pride of that perfidious nation shall be humbled in the dust.

MLLE. Cora Pearl turns up as often in connection with French affairs, as the ex-Empress Eugenie. The Pearl has returned to Paris in defiance of the police edict of banishment. In one sense she is a pearl of great price, but in another she isn't.

THE ASHANTEE WAR.

The Ashantee war has not made any progress of late. The rainy season has rendered impracticable any active field operations, and the British forces must await the return of more favorable weather before they can make any head against these troublesome savages. Indeed, it is questionable whether they will make any real impression on them; for the conditions of the country and the climate are such as to make them unbearable to Europeans at almost all seasons of the year. We have, by the latest accounts from Cape Coast Castle, a picture of deplorable misery amongst the Europeans in this uninviting part of the globe which it would be difficult to realize. The residents are packed together as closely as herrings in a barrel; dysentery and small-pox is raging; and the rain is falling in such torrents that a part of the castle at Cape Coast called the Spur Battery has been washed away; the native houses have followed in the wake of the battery, and upwards of 100 poor creatures have been crushed to death in one week by the falling roofs and walls; the small-pox hospital, yielding also to the tremendous cataract, has been levelled with the ground, and its 194 patients have been left to bear the brunt of the pitiless waters as best they may. But while the elements thus seem to have combined their forces with those of disease to ravage the camp of the unacclimated Europeans, the dusky warriors of Koffie Calcalli, inured to those hardships, have not been idle. The beautiful Missionary Station at Bulah, within five or six miles of Cape Coast, has been burnt by the Ashantees, who have quietly set up their standard, such as it is, upon the spot; and the garden attached to the station, planted and tended with the utmost care and at considerable cost, has been laid utterly waste by these barbarous and insolent invaders. It must be pretty evident by this time to our readers that the acquisition of the Gold Coast was a transaction which is not likely to bring them neither honor nor profit; and the Dutch Government must be credited with a good deal of that useful commodity, common sense, in getting rid of their profitless subjects and troublesome neighbors, and transferring their possessions to the care of the British Government.

The Results of the Election.

The rush and turmoil of the campaign is over; and the candidates for public honors can now rest on their oars, while they await impatiently the returns coming in slowly from the election precincts. Montgomery street is no longer blocked with crowds of anxious office seekers and needy constituents, while the piece clubs which a few weeks ago, sprung up with mushroom rapidity, have disappeared under a cloud. Finance committees have retired on their laurels, to fatten on the spoils of this well contested struggle, and peace happily asserts itself once more in our city. It is impossible at present to form any decided opinion as to the result of the campaign, but we believe, and earnestly hope that we are right in our conjectures, that the railroad monopoly force suffered a signal defeat at the hands of the people on Wednesday. The farmers everywhere throughout the state, have long been preparing for the struggle, organizing their forces, and nerving themselves for the battle, which was of the people against capital used as an engine of oppression. The struggle has been a momentous one—party feelings have been appealed to, religion has been dragged with sacriligious hand to the polls. but the people could not be cajoled. They have nobly vindicated themselves, and unless we are mistaken a brighter future is in store for the workingmen of California, as the Call wisely remarks:—The thrifty settler and small land-owner will feel a security unknown to them so long as the water supplies of the State were threatened to be monopolized, and the broad acres of the valleys and foot-hills to be seized upon by avaricious speculators. A warning has been given to the next Legislature, which it will not fail to heed. It will be held to a strict accountability—yet what party be in the majority—to carry out those reforms which were plainly indicated as the vital issues of the contest. No more of the public lands and money shall be voted away to satisfy railroad greed—no more laws passed to centralize corporate power at the expense of the people's liberties. The shackles of the grasping monopoly have been broken. The Railroad Company knows it—the people feel it—and today there is a concurrence of sentiment and a fraternity of rejoicing at the greatness of the objects achieved.

Division No 8 of the A. O. H. will hold their first annual picnic at Badger's Park Oakland, on Sunday September 7th. Every arrangement has been made to render the affair a success, which it will undoubtably be. Suitable prizes will be offered in the usual games, and the services of a splendid band has been secured for the occasion. With moderately fair weather and the extensive bill offered by the committee of arrangements, the large number of visitors who will throng Badger's Park on the occasion of the festival cannot fail to be thoroughly pleased.

The Political Prisoners.

At a meeting of the London Republicans, held some weeks ago, resolutions were passed condemning the imprisonment of the Fenian prisoners as cruel and unjustifiable, although the Amnesty Association have received letters from some members of Parliament, promising assistance in their praiseworthy efforts to secure an extension of amnesty to our suffering countrymen who are still in prison. Still we find there is no immediate prospect of release for the suffering men.

A COWARDLY CUR.

One of the latest and most startling innovations in modern local journalism, is the system of black mailing carried on with doubtful success by our Christian contemporary the "Independent Defender." The astute manager of that inflated journal despises the system of canvassing for advertisements, which the majority of struggling journals, "sick unto death" practise so persistently. In the very first issue of his paper, he inserted the business card of a well-known, highly respectable, and thoroughly liberal Irishman, K. Kenny, without asking permission to do so. Naturally the gentleman remonstrated, and what answer did he receive. In the very next issue the Independent Defender informed its owlish readers that Mr. Kenny lied, that he was under the impression that the Independent was to be a strictly radical Roman Catholic organ, devoted solely the glorious interests of the Pope and the Jesuits (heaven save the mark.) The assertion is as ridiculous as the insult to Mr. Kenny is gross and wanton. We have had the honor of his acquaintance for years, yet at this moment we could not positively swear whether he is a Roman Catholic, an Episcopalian, or a Mahommedan. Neither do we care. We have always found him upright in his business transactions, courteous and affable in private life—in fact a true Irish-American and a MAN in every respect. This is, we are sorry to say, more than any honest man can testify in behalf of the cowardly cur who has so wantonly insulted him. Mr. Kenny may feel proud that he has been singled out as an object of attack by the dusky genius of the Independent. To any honest, liberal-minded man, Irish or American, it is confirmation strong that he is immeasurably above the contaminating influences that surround the Independent Defender's supporters.

The Political Pot.

There is no doubt about any of the candidates on the Independent anti-Monopoly Legislative Ticket with the exception of Bartlett for Senator—he is closely pushed by Roach, and, unless the eighth ward stands by him, he will be undoubtedly beaten. The first and tenth wards are sure to give Roach a large majority over his opponent. Up to this moment, when we go to press, White seems to have no chance of competing successfully with the Tax-Payers' Candidate for Sheriff, Wm. McKibbin; and we doubt whether he will succeed James Adams for the ensuing term in the Shrievalty. Of Municipal Officers: Otis is undoubetedly the successful Candidate for Mayor, leading McDonald by a good majority in the gross vote reported thus far. Bauer is in a fair way of being elected, while there is no doubt that Frank, the Democratic Candidate for Recorder, will beat his opponent. District Attorney Murphy is polling a strong vote, Crowley has been beaten by Cockrill, and Denman will beat Widber for Superintendent of Schools. So far, it is easy to predict what the finale will be. Of the Fire Commissioners, we are unable to say anything definite, and therefore refrain from hazarding an opinion.

A Warm Reception.

THERE was a high old time in the Summer apartments of His Satanic Majesty when, a few weeks since, a defunct Crescent, after being wafted across by Charon, presented himself before his lord and master and offered as an humble token of San Francisco's appreciation of his talents the first copy of the Independent Defender, warm from the press and bright with the wit of its dusky editor. "I accept the offering," said the Prince of Darkness as he struck his tridend into the lumbar regions of the trembling sprite, and gently laid him to toast for eternity on a furnace, all brimstone and concentrated caloric.

"Ho, sirrah," he continued, "read this;" and folding up the newspaper he took deliberate aim at the head of his private secretary, whose hair stood on end as he conned over the Chronicle's report of the Dubois tragedy. "What are its principles—but first, where is it published—but, before that, who is the presiding genius?" * * * * * * *

"Silence!" cried his Satanic Majesty in tones of thunder, as one wild demoniac yell of mingled joy and despair burst from the lips of his colored attendents on the announcement of the talented editor's name. "If the journal is run in our interest by one of your lob-eared, lackadaisical lamb-blacked brethren, does it follow that the rules of infernal etiquette are to be ruthlessly violated?" saying which he seized a ten-ton cinder and hurled it at the head of a venerable son of Ham—a fac-simile of whose jetty locks and swarth hide graces the editorial sanctum of the Independent Defender. The long drawn aisles of Achron resounded to the fall of the sulphurous missile, and the sky became suddenly overcast, while the far distant temple of San Jose Justice, over which hovered the pig-tailed sprite of Gim Lewy, rocked to its very foundations.

An Indian Murderer.

Pedro is the name of a hang-dog aborigine whom officer Lyon lodged in Hollister jail. He is supposed to be the murderer of W. Guy, who met his death in Pacheco Pass some years since. The Indian's appearance tallies with the description in the hands of the Police, and suspicions have been further strengthened by the fact that several parties have identified him as the guide who accompanied Guy from Gilroy the day previous to the murder. Vengeance, though sometimes long delays, and occasionally lame of foot, is still sure.

The Pioneer Mills, at Sacramento, are being enlarged.

The Modern Caesar.

The Charlotte Observer says Cæsarism is one of the leading topics of the day, and one upon which almost every newspaper in the land has had "its say." The New York Herald, probably out of any other subject upon which to regale its readers, gave life to this subject, and has so energetically fanned the flame that General Grant's name has been brought so prominently before the country in connection with a third term that there are few men who have not formed some opinion in their own minds as to the probability or improbability of his being a candidate for the Presidency of the United States in 1876. The administration press affect to treat the matter as a huge joke; but it is evident that the articles which have been written by the friends of the administration are thrown out to feel the public pulse upon the question which is of such vital importance to the whole American people. We are disposed to treat the matter seriously. It is unquestionable that a large percentage of the people of the United States would gladly support and vote for Grant for a third term, the salary grab and other thieving and disreputable schemes in which he has been engaged to the contrary notwithstanding. We say this with shame and confusion of face, for it shows the low standard of public virtue and that a large part of our population are disposed to wink at the crimes against public honesty which are committed by their servants. Grant is undoubtedly willing to accept a third term, and would, no doubt, so avow himself to-day if his prospects depended upon that solely.

Railroad Slaughters.

The following letter, which was in all probability written in the New York Herald office, and ascribed to some unknown sage subscribing himself Pro Bono Publico, is however a very sensible one. Should our railroad magnates act on the suggestions it contains, the number of suits for damages brought against them would be sensibly diminished, and the mind of our travelling population considerably eased:—

Reading so very frequently in your valuable paper the accounts of those terrible accidents arising from collisions and running over obstructions on the track, I am tempted to ask our wealthy, soulless corporations, through the medium of the Herald, why they do not adopt the English plan of placing "milesmen" on their roads, and thereby prevent a majority of those accidents so common now. The expense would be trifling in comparison to the security reliable men so placed would afford.

They would prevent those human wolves from tampering with the track or switches, supply and secure spikes, keep any cattle or other obstructions off, and promptly notify the different trains of any accident to the roadbed by reason of "washouts" or "land slides," in time to prevent the familiar "smash-ups." I am informed that there is no road, with one exception, in the States so equipped, and none having a fence of wire their whole length.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

VASQUEZ,

The Mexican desperado and hero of the Tres Pinos horror, still pursues the even tenor of his way towards that wild and inaccessible spot known as the Cantua Cañon. It has served him ere this as a safe retreat when hotly pursued, and will, we fear, afford him shelter from the keen pursuit of Sheriffs Wasson and Adams. Vasquez is contrary to the general belief, a small man weighing only 115 pounds; but exceedingly strong and muscular, capable of enduring great hardships with comparatively little inconvenience, and possessed of the cunning of a fox, with a wolfish thirst for blood. Cool, desperate, and thoroughly acquainted with the country, he is dangerous as an enemy, and troublesome as a fugitive. For these reasons, the indomitable Sheriffs would do well to approach him cautiously and should they succeed in capturing him, exercise all their vigilance and discretion, till the inexorable gates of a strong prison shut him out from the pure air of heaven, which his vile breath pollutes.

GIM LEWY,

The Chinaman who loved the San Josè maiden Dubois, not wisely but too well, has been buried with all the pomp of a celestial martyr, and the Dtbois family, on whom the foul suspicion of murder rested heavily, have been restored to their home. Of the thousands of Chinamen who have been suddenly hastened into the presence af Josh, by suicide, murder, and accident since the first pig-tailed stranger strode over our sand hills, not one has created such an excitement as the infatuated lover who deliberately blew out his brains when spurned by Alice Dubois. At one time it looked as though Dubois, pere would be transferred from the witness stand to the dock, to answer for the murder of the rash lover; but, thanks to the skilful manœuvering of his counsel, and the absence of all save purely circumstantial evidence, his honor has been restored, and as a free rancher, he roams his native stubble once more.

SITKA QUARTZ MINES.

The steamer Telfair arrived from Alaska on Saturday. The purser reports that the excitement in Sitka is intense over the Quartz mines recently discovered in the vicinity. It is nothing short of a dispensation of Divine Providence that something has occurred to break the monotony of life in that God-forsaken land.

An Interesting Fact.

Many persons affect to believe that there is little use in advertising, urging as an objection that the advertisements are not read. This is a snare and a delusion. Let any one who doubts this assertion insert an advertisement offering to purchase some article that is tolerably plenty in the market and he will be importuned to death by applicants, almost before the ink of the advertisement has had time to dry. An enterprising weekly with a large and constantly increasing circulation, is in a position to do the merchant an incalculable amount of good. An honest and thoroughly reliable weekly, is in its sphere of quite as much service to the advertiser as is the daily, and oftimes enjoys the privilege of being the exclusive family visitor, a privilege the daily seldom has.

CITY NOTES OF THE WEEK.

A young man named John Gallagher was shot and instantly killed on Montgomery street on the night of Wednesday last by a ward politician named John Janes, who rejoices in a couple of aliases, of no very great interest to the public. The quarrel grew out of an electioneering squabble, in which Supervisor Kenney took a prominent and by no means creditable part. Janes had made himself particularly obnoxious to Supervisor Kenney, and on presenting his credentials as a representative of the Citizens' Union and requesting to be admitted into the Inspector's room, was refused admission by Dick Chute. He persisted in his attempts to enter, when Supervisor Kenney seized him by the hair of the head and struck him several times. Thinking discretion the better part of valor he withdrew, and in company with a few friends walked down Montgomery street. When near Commercial he was overtaken by one of his political opponents who struck him, and before he could recover from the blow Gallagher appeared on the scene and followed up the attack. Janes then drew his pistol and shot at Gallagher, the ball striking him under the left jaw and lodging in the brain. He instantly fell and remained insensible to the last. He was carried into Steele's drug store, where he expired in a few moments. Janes was shortly after arrested and lodged in prison, where it is possible he will remain for some time.

The evangelical Stone treated his congregation on Sunday evening to a dissertation on the beauties and ennobling sentiment contained in Bret Harte's Luck of Roaring Camp. Every nine out of ten persons know that the hero of the sketch is an infant prodigy, born of a disreputable mother, who passed away as she had lived, in sin and degradation. There is a very slight notice of his paternal progenitor, and perhaps it is well that it is so. The life of the infant was terminated rather suddenly by an overflow of the creek, on whose banks he first saw light, which swept away the concentrated filth and iniquity of Roaring Camp. Otherwise, it is not improbable that, with his training, the amiable child would have grown up perfectly intimate with the ways that are dark and posted on every trick that is vain, from drinking bad whisky and playing draw-poker to filling the part of leading villian in an assassination scene. A kind-hearted miner who prefixed every sentence with an oath, a gambler, three or four double-dyed roughs and a donkey fill in, and enhance the beauty of this delightful scene. We would respectfully suggest to Dr. Stone that, as it is impossible for him to find a suitable subject in the old or new testament whereon to expatiate, that he take at his next entertainment Don Juan's amour with Haidee as text. It has the merit of being poetic, full of soft twilight love and subdued passion. The innovation cannot fail to be received with pleasure by a congregation who listened spell-bound to the Luck of Roaring Camp.

A drunken son of Italy while clambering up the almost perpendicular stairs of a Kearney street lodging house, lost his equilibrium and fell backwards, making a terrific noise which attracted the attention of another noble Roman who instantly went to his assistance. Stooping over the prostrate man he was discovered by a third Roman who, imagining that he had interrupted a daring attempt at robbery, commenced to pummel him. This brought the terrified spouse of the drunken man to the scene, armed to the teeth with a coal scuttle and a bent poker, which she straightened on the back of the good samaritan. A young man named Calderwood who was passing, rushed in, hearing the screams of the woman, and attempted to make peace, but without success. The fight was raging fast and furious when a police officer made his appearance and escorted the whole party, including Calderwood, to the City Prison. The latter says the peace-makers may be blessed but he'll be d——d before he again interrupts a sociable free fight.

Never did the Horticultural Hall appear gayer with its thousands of variegated lights than on the occasion of the late Ball given by the Guardia Lerdo. There was music to which Paginini could have listened and been pleased, dancing on which Terpsichore could have looked and smiled, but above and before all, there was an air of good fellowship that enhanced the beauty of the scene and rendered the most timid and bashful, well pleased with themselves, and perfectly at home. A very pleasant portion of the entertainment was the rendition of the National Hymn of their native land by three young and beautiful girls dressed respectively in red, white and green, the colors which compose the flag of Mexico, The Guardia Lerdo deserve the highest enconiums for their management of this their first invitation Ball.

Miss Edmonia Lewis, the sculptress, gave an exhibition of her statuary at the Art Gallery on Pine street on Monday. All her subjects are of the peaceful and sentimental order, such as the "sleeping children," "love-sick," &c., &c. We never entertained a high opinion of female sculptors; they all attempt the classic and the beautiful, in which Canova achieved such wonderful success, and succeed admirably in showing how far short of the great master they have fallen. A strong-minded female gladiator, leaning with pensive brow on a gingham umbrella, while the big drops of perspiration trickle down her forehead, with the thermometer 100° in the shade, is a subject which, in the fullness of our hearts, we recommend to the notice of our rising female sculptors.

The fair Castilian, Senorita Josepha Morena, sailed majestically down the "festive gay Broadway" on Sunday evening, her jetty locks reflecting the rays of the setting sun, and her dusky cheek suffused with a healthful and maidenly blush. Slowly waddling from the opposite direction came the descendant of a long line of Teutonic wood-choppers, rejoicing in the cognomen of Hassen. 'Twas where the broad pave of Stockton street intersects Broadway they met, and there the amorous Teuton sealed his admiration with a kiss on the olive cheek of the Castilian maid. For this act of gallantry, as well as for abstracting her earnings, this gay Teutonic sport will pass beneath the gloomy porch of the Broadway Bastile, and, looking through the narrow wicket of his dungeon, sigh for that freedom he so recklessly adventured.

"Spurgeon," says a contemporary, "has lost much of the physical vigor he once had. He leans oftener and more heavily on his desk; his manner is more hesitating; his voice more low and conversational." We confess it gives us great pleasure to hear it. Nothing could have been more grotesque than the action of the great gospel expounder in his palmy days, when he was wont to pound the pulpit with the vim of a stalwarth blacksmith welding a steamboat shaft—when he cavorted around like a clown in a pantomime, and snorted like a frightened mustang. Truly whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

Our contemporary, the Monitor, is throwing its literary bombshells into the camp of the Independent Defender with effect, judging by the howls and squirming of that journalistic abortion. There is joy in heaven over a repentant sinner, but there is ten times more enthusiasm amongst the imps of darkness when a few bigoted, besotted, and fanatical fools evolve from their muddy brains the great idea of starting a literary sausage machine in which the ideas of every politico-religious dog may be reduced to bad English, and hashed up for a small but saintly constituency.

In our last issue we commented on the unbrotherly conduct of a pseudo M. D., calling himself Joel Docking, who endeavored to sow the seeds of family discord in his brother's home. We have since discovered that Joel Docking is not a pretended M. D., but a brick-mason residing on Filbert street; and instead of being the defendant was plaintiff in the suit of Docking v. Docking, which recently engaged the attention of the Police Court's gigantic intellects.

It seems rather odd that exactly in the great political crisis a grateful convalescent should raise his voice to testify to the magnanimity and ability of the argus-eyed Chief of the City and County Hospital. Truly hath the poet said there are more things in heaven and San Francisco than the unitiated are cognizant of.

The Call is not behind the age in those stirring times. Only last Sunday the readers of that highly respectable journal were favored with a readable article two columns in length, of closely packed figures, compiled with evident care. Several cases of softening of the brain have been reported since its publication.

William J. Bryan, who was convicted of manslaughter in the killing of a Chinaman at the latter's garden, on the Mission, about twelve months ago, was sentenced on Monday last by Judge McKee to two years imprisonment in the State Prison.

Jimmy Kennovan has a big bill advertised for to-morrow. Pedestrianism and the greased pole will entertain the "boys" who, after the fatigues of campaigning, will muster in force at the old rendezvous, North Beach.

The latest sensation is the discovery of gold on Bernal Heights—no spurious imitation, but the bona fide metal. The Call says so, and no one doubts for a moment the grave assertion of that veracious journal.

Philo Jacoby, the sharp-shooting proprietor of the Hebrew, was wined at the expense of his admirers on Thursday.

The San Francisco Cadets.

The cadets are meeting with unequivocal success in the East, drawing crowded houses and partaking of the "handsome collations" as becomes military heroes in the hey dey of their prosperity. Wining and speech making occupies their time pleasantly between the intervals ot drilling. Of their exhibition drill given at the Seventh Regiment Armory on the night of the 26th ult., the New York Herald speaks in the following favorable terms:

The Cadets last evening, blindfolded, performed with marvellous accuracy all the regulation manœuvres in marching in close and open order, the skirmishing drill and rally, as well as many complex movements of Captain McDonald's own invention. They rallied by threes, fours, eights and en masse, formed squares, guarded against infantry, aimed, fired, fell down, rolled over, retired and otherwise succeeded in startling the nerves of the Seventh men, who had hitherto modestly confined themselves to an open-eye drill and Upton. The enthusiasm of the Captain, who was so evidently enlisted in the success of his boys that he accompanied every command by an energetic effort of his lungs, equal to the needs of a regiment, and zealously performed the manœuvres he had ordered, infected the audience, and achieved for his company probably a greater success than either the accuracy or novelty of their manœuvres demanded. The applause was very hearty, and, at the close, the Seventh men present saluted the company with that modulated yell which that model regiment alone, and then only in moments of enthusiasm, has invented to express its feelings.

The matter will be made a cabinet question, and if the original is adopted, President Salmeron and his cabinet will resign, and Senor Castellar be called upon to from a new ministry.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

The White Sage.—A new preparation is offered to the public for the restoration of the hair by Dr. L. Terry, 323 Third street, and from the great number of testimonials published by prominent citizens of Elko, Nevada, of its efficacy in giving strength to the hair, and the speedy return of it to those who have been bald, oblige us to look upon it with more favor than the thousand other preparations already in the market. The Elko Independent says: "A decoction of White Sage will accomplish more in restoring bald heads, fastening falling hair and renovating and giving healthy action to the scalp than a whole store of the usual remedies advertised for that purpose. Hundreds now in Nevada can testify to this fact, and a trial will convince any doubting Joseph that what we say of it in this respect will be borne out by results, if he will give it a fair trial." If such is the case, the Doctor will reap a rich harvest, for no other city can boast of as many bald-headed people as San Francisco. The medicine can be obtained from every druggist. None genuine without the signature of L. Terry, M. D., on the outside of the wrapper. Heathfield, Bogel & Co., General Agents. Sole Distiller, Dr. L. Terry, Elko, Nevada.

Pictures.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that our friends Kenny & Co. have taken and fitted up in superb style a large store in the new hotel building corner of Fifth and Market streets. They have lately returned from the East, bringing with them a large and well-assorted stock of pictures of more than common style of art. Their lengthened experience in the trade has enabled them to offer superior drawings, chromos, prints, and framed pictures at a moderate rate. They have now on exhibition pictures of a hundred classes and representative of scenery and life in all climes. When inspecting their varied stock, we naturally gave most attention to what was Irish. We found the Giant's Causeway, Vale of Avoca, Lakes of Killarney and other familiar places as they should be, as well as several delineations of muscular Christianity, which should be seen to be appreciated.

A FELON'S MUSINGS.

BY MICHAEL DOHENY.

I sang thee other lays,
Aileen aroon,
But these were happy days,
Aileen aroon,
When mount, and vale, and grove,
Where we were wont to rove,
Were beautified by love,
Aileen aroon.

I said I loved thee well,
Aileen aroon,
Too fondly far to tell,
Aileen aroon;
I loved thee as the day,
Still brighter for the ray,
Thy smile shed o'er my way,
Aileen aroon.

But day has turned to night,
Aileen aroon,
With clouds, and gloom, and blight,
Aileen aroon,
Yet here an outlaw lone,
My heart else, like a stone,
Is more and more thy own,
Aileen aroon.

When in some rocky glen,
Aileen aroon,
I share the wild dog's den,
Aileen aroon,
Oppressed with woe and care,
As sleep comes o'er me there,
Methinks I hear thy prayer,
Aileen aroon.

Throughout that troubled rest,
Aileen aroon,
Thy image fills my breast,
Aileen aroon;
And e'er the vision's fled,
My cold and flinty bed,
Seems down unto my head,
Aileen aroon.

As night's dark shadow flies,
Aileen aroon,
Along the opening skies,
Aileen aroon,
In the soft purpling ray,
That heralds early day,
I see thy fond smile play,
Aileen aroon.

When dangers thicken fast,
Aileen aroon,
My fate seems sealed at last,
Aileen aroon.
A low voice near,
Still whispers in mine ear—
For her sake do not fear—
Aileen aroon.

And oh, 'tis that lone hope,
Aileen aroon,
That nerves this heart to cope,
Aileen aroon,
With peril and with pain,
And surging of the brain,
More boisterous than the main,
Aileen aroon.

How Queen Victoria got so Rich.

A London correspondent of the New York World has got hold of some of the secrets of the English royal household, and here is his account of how the thrifty lady that rules Great Britain put enough money in her purse to last her for her lifetime at all events:—

Prince Albert's will has been kept a secret to this day, and no one knows what it contained. The rumor is that the Prince left everything to the Queen, and that he also laid injunctions upon her not to convert any of the property into money for the purpose of giving the money to the Prince of Wales. That young gentleman, it will be remembered, was in disgrace with his papa at the time of the latter's death—indeed the death itself was the consequence of a cold caught on a sudden journey to Oxford, whither Prince Albert had been summoned in haste to get his son out of a disgraceful and dangerous scrape in which he was involved.

No one at the present day knows exactly what are "the private estates" of the Queen. The estate of Balmoral and the Osborne estate are known, and their value can be estimated; but there are in addition, the Kensington estates, of which no one but the Queen and her private agents know anything.

When the plan for the construction of the South Kensington Museum was first devised, there were miles of unoccupied land lying around the spot chosen for the great collection of buildings now known as the exhibition, the Museum, and Albert Hall; and there were other miles of streets only partly built, and having for the most part cheap and poor houses upon them. A little ring was formed—Prince Albert, Mr. Dilke, (afterward Sir C. W. Dilke) and two or three others composed it, and by this ring the greater part of this property was quietly bought up before the plan for the museum, etc., was made public. This was more than twenty years ago.

The whole of that region is now densely covered with fine houses, and what cost only a few hundred thousands is now worth millions. Prince Albert's share of this is now the property of the Queen, and these Kensington estates are in themselves a very large fortune. Altogether, in money and landed property, to say nothing of the jewels, her majesty is supposed to possess something like £6,000,000 sterling, while no one really knows how much she has; and the amount may be £16,000,000 or even £60,000,000, for aught any one can show to the contrary.

The following is a list of the nick names of a number of the cities of the Union: New York, Gotham; Boston, the Modern Athens; Philadelphia, the Quaker City; Baltimore, the Monumental City; Cincinnati, the Queen City; New Orleans, the Crescent City; Washington, the City of Magnificent Distances; Chicago, the Garden City; Detroit, the City of Straits; Cleveland, the Forest City; Pittsburgh, the Iron City; New Haven, the City of Elms; Indianapolis, the Railroad City; St. Louis, the City of Mounds; Keokuk, the Gate City; Louisville, the Falls City; Nashville, the City of Rocks; Quincy, the Model City; Hannibal, the Bluff City; Alexandria, the Delta City; Newburyport, the Garden of Eden; Salem, the City of Peace; San Francisco, the Second Hong Kong.

THE COBURGHS ARE LUCKY.—There is the Duke of Edinburgh, for example, to whom the British Parliament voted an income of £25,000 a year. Conjointly, H. R. H. gets a beautiful princess for a wife, whose dowry most likely will be a splendid one. The English democracy have had a snarl over the royal tar's allowance, and have pitched their objections in a very high tone.

CHAPTER VI.

FRENCH DECREE IN FAVOR OF THE WHOLE HUMAN RACE—REV. WILLIAM JACKSON—ENGLISH SPY JACKSON SEIZED—SIMILAR FATE OF JACKSON, CATO, AND JUDAS MACCABEUS.—JACKSON TAKES POISON TO ESCAPE PUBLIC EXECUTION—JUDGE'S CHARGE—SUICIDE OF THADEUS O'BYRNE.

On the 19th of November, 1792, "a decree of fraternity (or brotherhood), and assistance to all people" was unanimously passed by the National Convention, and ordered to be forthwith translated and printed in all languages. This glorious emanation from the old Gauls or Celts ran thus:—"The National Convention declare in the name of the French nation, that they will grant fraternity and assistance to all people who wish to recover their liberty; and they charge the executive power to send the necessary orders to the generals, to give assistance to such people, and to defend those citizens who have suffered or may suffer in the cause of liberty."

The flame of freedom, once kindled in France, quickly spread through all Europe. In 1793-4, the Rev. William Jackson, an Irish Protestant clergyman, and a native of Ulster, having visited France, became a convert to, and a zealous disciple of the new French republican doctrines; and returned with a view of extending those ideas in England and Ireland, where the people were then groaning under the most corrupt and wealthy aristocracy in the world. Having returned to Ireland, the Protestant patriot became acquainted with those Irish natural robleman, Hamilton Rowan, and Theobald Wolfe Tone.

Meantime William Pitt had employed an English spy or traitor, named Cackayne, who got into the confidence of the honorable and unsuspecting Jackson, and then betrayed him, and swore away his life for vile money, This Irish Protestant clergyman was accordingly marked out for death. He was arrested in April, 1794, by the paid tools of a foreign-ascendancy faction and dragged to an English dungeon, where so many millions of Irish patriots and martyrs had gone before him, for the crime of believing in and practising the natural doctrine of liberty, which the Creator has even taught the very savages to die for.

After pining for a whole year within the dismal walls of an English state prison, this poor Protestant republican was hauled up for an English trial and condemnation. He was accused by his persecutors of two species of treason, compassing the death of George Guelphs the Third, an English king, a great enemy to the liberties of man; and a long paper of indictments, written out by scriveners or clerks, and containing charges of no less than fourteen overt acts, was produced, as a closer, to settle things as the government wished.

Seeing that there was no chance of escaping death, once he had fallen into the clutches of the English, this Irish clergyman, who was not a common man, determined to deprive his persecutors of the pleasure, revenge, and victory, which they expected to enjoy, by offering up a human sacrifice on the public scaffold, as the Mexicans used to do,

When entering conscientiously and disinterestedly on the course which he esteemed best, the Rev. Mr. Jackson seems, like a true-blooded Irishman, to have calculated the danger before hand, and made up his mind to lose his life in the cause of natural liberty and Old Ireland, without, of course, foreseeing how he should die. Cato was highly honored by the ancient Romans, because seeing that Cæsar was triumphant, the republic destroyed, and that he could no longer live free, he called for his sword, and willingly died by his own hand. Judas Maccabeus, the High Priest of the Jews, who, says the Jewish historian, Josephus, "left him a glorious reputation," also willingly offered himself up to certain death, for his country and liberty, when he, unlike Jackson, might have escaped. Bacchides, the Syrian general, having entered Judea—by the command of Demetrius, king of Syria,—at the head of 20,000 foot, and 2,000 horse, Judas marched against him with only 1,000 men, who shortly after were reduced, by desertion, to only 800. When this little band of Jews said that they were not a body sufficient to fight so great an army, Judas, their High Priest and leader, thus replied: "Let not the sun ever see such a thing, that I should show my back to the enemy; and although this be the time that will bring me to my end, and I must die in this battle, I will rather stand to it courageously, and bear whatsoever comes upon me, than, by now running away, bring reproach upon my former great actions, or tarnish their glory."

However justifiable or glorious such deaths as those of the senator Cato, or Judas Maccabeus, the High Priest, might have been esteemed by the ancients, moderns have been taught to regard voluntry death or suicide in a different light; and all sects of Christianity seem to have agreed in this, that it is sinful to anticipate death, no matter how disgraceful, or cruel, or certain such death may chance to be. Notwithstanding what holy men say, human nature, when exposed to great trials, will, it is to be lamented, occasionally break through all given regulations. Where the exact boundaries of martyrdom begin or end, the most learned theologians have, at the same time, sometimes found it difficult to define. Thus, in the first ages of Christianity, we read that many Christians, in their zeal to partake of expected happiness in another existence, used rather to seek death, and were on some occasion thought to be too prodigal of their lives. Many pious or noble-minded virgins, also, to avoid insult or dishonor, have thrown themselves over precipices and into rivers and lakes, and have been defended for such condnct by Christian writers.

Every day thousands of men go to certain death, and hire out their lives in the army or navy for mere money, and without the least idea of principle. Many likewise cut off their lives by their own vices; many also, from the crimes they have perpetrated, die like Judas and Castlereagh, by their own hands. Thus all human nature is frail, and no wonder that Jackson, when tried beyond his strength, yielded to his impulses, and hurried out of a world where he found nothing but persecution and inconsistency, being condemned to death, because he desired to see Ireland a republic; while Washington, the American republican, who committed the very same crime, is deservedly lauded up to the skies.

While a barber in Philipsburgh, Pa., was recently shaving a blind man, a drunken vagabond staggered into the shop, knocked against the barber, and caused him to inflict a frightful gash, which it was feared would prove fatal, in the throat of the man he was shaving.

Poor Spain—Progress of the Royalists—Don Carlos as a Constitutional King.

The horror and confusion of the Spanish anarchy daily intensify. The condition of the country closely resembles that of Ireland in the eventful years which followed the rising of 1641. The appalling element of the Irish Civil war was simultaneous appearance in the field of four or five different parties, all engaged in internecine conflict. ORMOND and INCHIQUIN and BROGHILL each fought "for their own hands," and the country was torn and consumed in the struggle. In Spain to-day we have, at least, three great parties in the field, all hating each other with a bitter hate. We have the Government at Madrid. We have the Carlist army in the North, daily growing in numbers, in prestige, in influence, proceeding from victory to victory, and holding as absolute masters a vast district of Spain. And while the Carlists are triumphing in the North, a still more formidable foe has appeared in the great provincial cities. In Seville, in Valencia, in Carthagena, in Granada, the worst excesses of the Parisian Commune have been repeated.

The Government troops having, after a desperate struggle, defeated the Reds of Seville, the latter in their hour of reverse applied the torch to some of the noblest buildings of their ancient and beautiful city and the grand old town has been partially reduced to a heap of smouldering ruins. English journals while deploring the ravages war has made on the historic land, lose no opportunity to show that Don Carlos is the saviour of Spain—the only in whom is vested the power to restore peace and order to the sadly demoralized county. They say he has been misrepresented, that vile calumnies have been uttered against him, and we believe it—nothing is more natural under existing circumstances. They add furthermore that should he ascend the throne of Spain he will not rule as a despotic sovereign, but as a constitutional King, with a free parliament. This we can readily believe, for the people of Spain have tasted liberty, and must be indeed a degenerate race if they calmly submit to a form of Government which is tolerated only by the down-trodden Asiatic hordes, and the savages and heathean nations of the earth, sunk in ignorance or blinded by fanaticism. But we doubt that as a constitutional King he can restore peace and prosperity to Spain. There is no parliament in the world possessing more freedom, or power than that of England, yet her people are not happy. They groan beneath oppressive taxes, levied to maintain a powerful army, which is a necessary adjunct of a monarchial power, an equally powerful navy and a bloated aristocracy to fill the measure of kingly pomp. We are not at all sure that Don Carlos will ever sway the sceptre in Spain as a constitutional King. But if he does we fear his reign will be neither long, peaceful nor pleasant.

The Royal Irish Constabulary.

Another officer of the Royal Irish Constabulary has been compelled to stand in the dock, accused of a grievous crime. Scarcely had the voice of Mr. Sub-Inspector Montgomery ceased to defile the air, when Mr. Sub-Inspector Kerney was forced into the dock in an adjacent county, for the abominable offence of having committed an indecent assault upon a young girl. Really, it is high time some rigid measures of discipline should be enforced to stay the terrible immortality of which the officers of police have given such shameful examples. These are not the first, or only cases, nor will they be the last, if the indignation of the country do not compel the Government to step out of that singular remissness, which leaves these men so much leisure for evil-doing.

A year ago, a Sub-Inspector was an accused party, in a case for which a divorce was sought. Then came Sub-Inspector Montgomery's deliberate and hideous assassination of his "friend," whose safety he was bound to guard with special care. Now, Sub-Inspector Kenney is sent to prison for a vile and shocking assault upon female virtue.

When is this flood of crime to abate—A fortnight ago we commented on the case of a Mounted Constable, who had perpetrated a precisely similar crime. This infamous ruffian assailed a poor young girl by brutal force for a brutal purpose. Accused of this horrible crime—found guilty of having treacherously turned against those he was bound to protect, and of having violently assaulted one whom he was pledged to defend—what was his sentence?—What punishment was awarded to this nefarious monster in human form, who dared to attack, by brute violence, the virtue of an innocent Irish girl?

Precisely at the time of the occurrence a man was sentenced to several years' penal servitude for having stolen a few ounces of tea. What, then, was the punishment awarded to this felonious traitor, who had committed a crime infinitely more abominable.

One years' imprisonment!

And Mr. Sub-Inspector Kerney, who has been found guilty of having also betrayed the trust reposed in him, and committed an indecent assault—what is the term of his punishment.

Six months' imprisonment.

If, instead of having belonged to the constabulary, these had been found guilty, not of a horrible offence, but of the crime of having a percussion cap, or a few grains of shot in their house—would not the punishment have been incomparably more severe.—Dublin Irishman.

The average of through passengers from the east, has been of late about 150 per day. The arrivals in April were 4,413, against 3,449, in 1872, 3,149 in 1871 and 3,527, against 3,449 in 1870. The departures during April were 2,279, or only about one-half the arrivals. The months of largest travel are April, June, October, and (in 1872) November. The sea arrivals in April were 2,979, against 1,856 for April, '72.

STANZAS

COMPOSED AT THE REQUEST OF A FRIEND.

BY RIENZO,

I know a green grave,
By a sighing stream;
And there lingers long,
The day's dying beam,
Ah! dear unto me is that spot, where you lie,
Loved Mary!

The wild, wintry blast
Was sweeping the vale;
The snows were whitening
Mountain and dale,
When low 'neath that heaped mound, they laid thee—
Loved Mary.

And came bloomy spring;
And with fair flow'rs dress'd
The chill, hurried grave;
Thy lone couch of rest,
Ah! kindly, her perfumes she shed o'er thee,
Loved Mary!

With rich, sapphire heav'ns
That wept not showers,
The bright summer stole
From Orient bowers,
And softly she smiled on the turf above thee,
Loved Mary!

Now autumn hath come,
With the year's golden wealth,
And cold, cheerless winter
Advances by stealth—
Oh! he shall come but to find me with thee,
Loved Mary,

Tuam, August, 1873.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A DROWNING PRINCE.

His Royal Highness Prince Arthur, who has been recruiting his health at a French watering place for some time, had a narrow escape from drowning on the 30th ult. Inheriting the poetic temperament of the besotted Georges, he is naturally fond of solitude. On Saturday last he went alone to bathe, and confident in his prowess swam out to a considerable distance from the shore—possibly he imagined there was some loyal sea nymph watching his movements—perhaps his regal mind was engrossed with thoughts of his approaching marriage—but he heeded not the receding shore till a feeling of faintness seized him, and with a royal yell he sank beneath the waves. Then, it became apparent, how safe and pleasant is the life of a Prince, and how much watchfulness hedges in the worthless carcass of a King. A cry of help was raised; and, instantly, a brave aide-de-camp, who was toying with his moustache on the beach, jumped into a boat, seized the oars, and in a twinkling had reached the drowning prince, and dragged him by the hair of his head into the boat, insensible. Restoratives were instantly applied, and ere the telegraphic message which was dispatched to Windsor Castle had reached its destination, the royal "tar" was able to return to his hotel.

SLAVERY IN CUBA,

After great mental tribulation the oligarchists of Cuba have hit on a plan of abolishing slavery in Cuba at once and forever. The plan is as ridiculous as it is impracticable under present circumstances. The whole affair is, in fact, only a "dodge" to prevent slaves ever being manumitted. The authors of the "plan" of the law of emancipation are wrong in the very first instance, as they start with the presumption of speaking in the name of the inhabitants of Cuba. These slaveocrats, on submitting the "plan" to the Cortes, stated that "it is necessary to abolish slavery in the Island of Cuba, at once and forever without deferment of any kind," yet they distinctly state in another that the law is not to be established until six months after the last armed insurgent is wiped out, which will be about the time of the millenium. Truly, the path of the Legislator is a tortuous one.

THE SLAVE TRADE IN AFRICA ABOLISHED.

The "Daily Telegraph" of the 13th ult. publishes a letter from Mr. James Baker, of Saighton Grange, Chester, enclosing a letter received from his brother, Sir Samuel Baker, dated Ismalia, May 13th, in which the latter says:—I can only thank God most sincerely that we have overcome all opposition, and succeeded in the main objects of the expedition, the suppression of the slave trade and annexation of the Central Nile basin to Egypt. The territory now extends to the Equator. We have had many difficulties, and personal dangers have been caused by gross treachery. In open war I had no doubt of success. Our enemies have been crushed, and the government is now triumphantly established throughout the country. There are now eleven steamers on the White Nile, and with honest cruising no slaver can hope to escape.

THE SEARCH FOR LIVINGSTONE.

is being energetically conducted since I wrote to Sir Roderick. The King of Uganda, Metese, sent messengers to me at Tatiko, saying that his men had been to Ujiji, and declared that Livingstone had left that place long ago for the west side of Tanganyika, since which nothing was known of him. They also reported that three white men had been to Ujiji, but had returned. I sent one of my men with Metese's envoys to remain with him as my agent. This man (Selim) was one of Speke's "faithfuls," who, having got drunk in Alexandria, was seized by the police and made a soldier; thus his destiny brought him into my service. I wrote a letter to Livingstone, which will certainly reach him if he comes north, and the King of Uganda will receive him and kindly forward him to the government station.

TRIAL OF MARSHAL BAZAINE.

It is stated that the report which has been drawn up by General Riviere in support of the charges against Marshal Bazaine, fills four octavo volumes. It has been communicated to the Duc d'Aumale, the President of the Council, and to M. Lachaud, who will defend the accused. Marshal Bazaine is charged, first, with having capitulated with the enemy, and surrendered Metz without having exhausted all the means of defense; and, second, with having signed a capitulation, the result of which was to compel his troops to lay down their arms without having previously done everything he was bound to do by duty and honor.

ANOTHER ROYAL PAUPER.

Princess Louise, wife of the Marquis of Lorne, is enceinte. In a few months we may look for a gorgeous christening, if the Fates are only moderately propitious, and if the Gods do not love the interesting babe too much, and transfer it from the empty pomp and glitter of an earthly palace to the realms of light and happiness, we may look forward to another assessment for the support of this embryo scion of royalty—the Guelphs are prolific of nothing else, but every species of worthless animal is possessed of the same virtue.

Relative beauty—A cousin.

CUPID IN COURT.

THE TROUBLES OF A "LIMERICK LASS"—LOVE, WHISKY AND PERFIDY.

A remarkable and interesting breach of promise case was tried last month at the Limerick (Ireland) Assizes. The parties were of high social standing. The circumstances attending the affair were decidedly sensational, and the correspondence which was produced in court was of the most gushing and love sick character The eyes of the whole country were turned upon the proceedings, and the court room during their progress was crowded to excess, the majority being ladies, comprising the rank and fashion of the province.

THE INJURED FAIR ONE.

The plaintiff, Miss Elizabeth Sheehy, is the daughter of a magistrate, occupying a prominent and influential position. She is now twenty-six years old. The family lived in ease and elegance, and the younger members having had the advantage of receiving a superior education, they were people of taste and refinement. Miss Bessie is beyond the ordinary height, and is described as possessing in mind and person all the qualities calculated to make her a desirable wife for any man, no matter how high his station in life. Major John O'Leary, the defendent, is a nephew of one who was among the foremost men in the British army—the late Sir Richard DeLacy Evans—a commander who by his sword had made a fortune. In Spain, fighting against Don Carlos forty years ago, and in the Crimea in 1854 and 1855, and in the field and in the council he had proved himself a soldier and an accomplished general. Major O'Leary is one of two children of Sir Richard De Lacy's only sister. The parties to the action met for the first time in 1865. They were only a month acquainted when the Major proposed and was accepted.

HE SAW AND SHE CONQUERED.

They continued corresponding lovers for years, and the letters, as will be seen, were of a very ardent nature. O'Leary was major in the royal county militia. From his earliest life he was always in difficulties, and to drown his troubles drank heavily. He was allowed a small income, which was paid quarterly, and he remained idling his time while his uncle could do anything in the way of promotion for him in the army. When the engagement was entered into Miss Bessie was a charming girl of eighteen Sir De Lacy had some objections to his nephew marrying at all, and even if none existed in that quarter the Major was too poor to venture on matrimony. But on Sir Richard's death the defendant was to inherit a very large fortune. The old General died in 1870. It was stated on the trial that O'Leary had $60,000 in cash, a fine family residence and an income of $3,000 a year. The warm affection that sprung up between plaintiff and defendant—an affection which after the lapse of eight years finally died away and caused the fair plaintiff to seek redress for her wrongs in a court of justice, She claimed $25,000 damages.

AN ARDENT EFFUSION,

There were no less than 150 letters from the gallant major to Miss Sheehy, read at the trial. The following is a fair sample.

MY OWN DARLING, MY LOVED AND EVER-TO-BE-LOVED WIFE, MY OWN HEART'S DARLING—I will give you no excuse for not writing till I see you I never felt as I felt on the day I left. I knew I would be longer away than usual. I will never forget that awful feeling I had when I lost sight of you. Whatever any one says, I must see you. I cannot live without being near you, my own heart's love. You will scarcely be able to read this, for my hand is as big as a dozen. [He had a fall from a horse.] I am, my own darling Bessie and ever-beloved wife, your ever-loving husband. JACK O'LEARY.

And yet after penning such an effusion as this, the cold blooded monster broke off entirely with his fair inamorata, and seeking other fields and pastures new, left her in sorrow and mortification to mourn the blighted hopes of eight years misspent courtship. The plaintiff made one last desperate effort to regain the affections of her fickle lover and penned him a letter commencing with

OH! JOHN WHAT HAVE YOU DONE!!

Oh! God you have jilted me in the end, etc., etc., to the end of a long and heart rending communication, but it took not the least effect on the marble heart of the gallant major, and the action for breach of promise of marriage was commenced. Miss Sheehy appeared as a witness at the trial, dressed in mourning. The manner in which she gave her evidence elicited unqualified approbation from all parties. Though anxious looking and somewhat nervous she testified with great care and delicacy, and her accuracy as to dates, extending over seven years, was a subject of general remark. The case was clear against the Major, and the only thing sought by his counsel was to keep the damages down as low as possible. O'Leary inherited three years ago from his uncle, Sir De Lacy Evans, the sum of $150,000 and an income of $2,000 per year, but it was contended that the lawyers had managed to swallow up a large share of this money. The defendant was a man of grossly intemperate habits and his health has become very feeble. Up to the death of Sir De Lacy, as stated above, he was in receipt of a small income—in short, he was deeply in debt and hardly able to sustain himself; but it was known that he was to be heir of his uncle. The reason the marriage was deterred so long was in consequence of his poverty.

GODDESSES IN PETTICOATS.

During the trial counsel engaged for Miss Sheehy, indulged in many flights of eloquence in which they painted the female character in the most bewitching colors. One, addressing the fair ones who were present as spectators, styled them "goddesses," and was rewarded by waving of handkerchiefs and clapping of hands. The gentlemen were no less enthusiastic, and the plaintiff fairly found herself, amid all her sorrows, a heroine. The people felt she had been greatly wronged, and the Major's counsel disavowed from beginning to end that they designed to cast the slightest reflection on her character or conduct. Baron Deasey, who presided, joined also in paying a handsome compliment to Miss Sheehy, and expressed his deep sympathy for the way she has been treated. After a few minutes deliberation the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff of $9,500, and all on the prosecutors side was merry as a marriage bell, while the poor plucked defendant returned to his home in sorrow and sought consolation in a friendly brandy bottle.

MRS. DR. MARY WALKER is off with her pantaloons for Alaska, and we will gladly pay double-price to look at a monster sea-lion in Barnum's aquarium some day, which has swallowed the intolerable little nuisance.

Last Saturday 500 tons of wheat reached Vallejo.

MEDICAL.

DR. BRENAN,

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN,

Physician, Surgeon and Lecturer,

LATE OF PHILADELPHIA, THE FOUNTAIN HEAD of all medical science in this country, who has spent the last thirteen years in travelling through all the principal cities in Europe and the United States, giving lectures and treating some of the most complicated and long-standing diseases, has now permanently located himself in San Francisco, at

127 Montgomery Street,

Opposite the Occidental Hotel entrance. Although DR. BRENAN may differ considerably in his practice from many members of the Profession, yet, he is possessed of the highest credentials from the most learned and celebrated Medical Colleges in the country; and all who have attended his lectures bear witness to the clear and lucid manner in which he defines every portion of the human frame, giving the reasons for the various diseases which the tissues of the human body are subject to, and illustrating every portion of the human system by the simple aid of a black-board, thereby proving himself to be thoroughly acquainted with the anatomy of the human configuration. On these lectures the Press of all our large cities have showered the highest encomiums of praise; and DR. BRENAN has been also greatly complimented by the leading physicians of the day. He has devoted much of his time and research to the diseases of the nervous system and reproductive organs, and also to general and nervous debility. And for this purpose DR. BRENAN spent several years in Paris, where the best facility is offered for the thorough investigation of the cause of these most complicated diseases. Nasal Catarrh and other diseases of the throat and chest, have also been the subject of special lectures delivered throughout the country. The Doctor, therefore, offers his services with confidence to all the afflicted of humanity who may suffer from any of the complaints incidental to the human frame. In addition to his own professional office and consultation room, the Doctor has also secured parlors affording every convenience for the accommodation of ladies and gentleman separately.

Office, 127 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel entrance. Office Hours—9 to 12 and 1 to 5; in the evenings, 6 to 8.

Correspondence will be promptly answered, and a list of printed questions forwarded to patients in any part of the United States, and by the answers DR. BRENAN can tell the disease almost as readily as by seeing the patient. Post Office Box 291. aug23-1y
